

20. PRACTICE : SYNCHRONICITY AND BRAIN EXPANSION

DURATION : 06:01

STUDY SHEET

COURSE SUMMARY

This video explores innovative techniques focused on synchronicity and cerebral expansion, essential for practitioners in osteopathy and biodynamic embryology. You will learn to assess brain energy using tai chi movements and holistic approaches based on a micro-crystalline field. The session focuses on rebalancing the body, working on specific axes such as the mesenteric, to release ancient vital energy and promote sensations of cerebral expansion. Practitioners will be guided through experiences observing the subtle effects of these techniques, while being encouraged to share their feelings for collective learning.

PRACTISING SYNCHRONICITY AND BRAIN EXPANSION

During our last session, we discussed the importance of gentleness in our approach. It is essential to work on a micro-crystalline field to establish a holistic contact with the body.

The first piece of information I look for to assess expansion is the brain's tai-chi. A lack of energy at the back indicates potential fatigue, which means it is necessary to rebalance an axis, particularly in the mesenteric. This can be beneficial for the digestive system and help revitalise the body.

I observe a lack of magnetic force in the brain, which leads me to explore a nutritive plane at the level of the cranium. It is important to relax the hands and adopt a less precise approach, taking distance and developing peripheral vision. Allow sensations to come into your hands and feel the expansion.

The first movement to perform is an expansion. By modifying an axis, I will precisely seek the mesenteric axis, connecting to an embryonic remnant to assist this force. I must seek globality, starting at a splenic level. I reconnect the body with an ancient vital energy that the brain knows, on a vascular plane that is primarily an electrical field.

An oxidative change has been made, modifying the respiration and allowing me to position myself on another axis, an almost phallomesenteric vestige. This creates a deeper sensation in the brain. Note the changes and observe what happens when this rises into the depths of the brain.

The four nutritive levels consist of four tubes: the spinal column and the carotids, forming the basilar trunk. I will release a plane, and you will be able to observe the effects. You might feel warmth in the head, which is normal.

We are working here on a subtle level. Deep down, I feel a release. The term "Liberianes" comes to mind, and I think it will do you good.

The diaphragm, which is a little disturbed, is the first to be treated. Describe your sensations, as this can lead to significant changes. You might feel an untangling, particularly in the mouth area. The tongue is often considered the bud of the heart, and this approach will revitalise closed circuits.

Does this feel good to you? Is there anyone else who would like to share their experience?