DURATION : 01:03

STUDY SHEET

COURSE SUMMARY

In this video, learn a yoga exercise focused on hara control, essential for emotional and physical stability. By placing your right hand in your left hand and visualising a sword in your belly, you develop a deep awareness of this key region. Through deep breaths, slow exhalations, and prolonged apnoeas, you will be guided to strengthen your mastery of the hara. This progressive method will help you increase both the number of repetitions and the duration of the apnoea, allowing you to achieve a practice of up to two minutes without breathing.

YOGA EXERCISE: HARA CONTROL

For this exercise, start by placing your right hand in your left hand. Imagine you are holding a sword at the level of your abdomen, which will help you gain control over the hara.

Begin by breathing deeply into your abdomen. Inhale through your nose, then slowly exhale through your mouth.

Hold your breath for ten seconds after exhaling. Then, inhale again.

Practise this exercise three times, gradually increasing the number of repetitions to thirty. Over time, you will be able to extend the breath-hold duration to one to two minutes without breathing.
